

Textbooks: Frequently asked Questions:

Do I have to buy my textbook through Direct Textbook?

You do not need to use the Direct Textbook link; however, it is one of the best search engines to find new, used, and rental textbook options. Furthermore, Direct Textbook donates 3%-5% of your purchase back to the school. That money will be designated for staff development.

Could I buy an online edition?

Students must have a paper copy of the textbook, either hardback or paperback. If an online edition is available, the school will provide it for the students to be used in addition to the paper copy that is required.

The textbook is available for free as a Pdf. May I download it and use it in class? Students would have to print the pages and bring them to class every day. It is probably cheaper to purchase the book than to print the entire book.

Do I buy new or used textbooks?

Buy used when you can find them. Encourage your student to write and highlight in the books.

Is it OK to buy a used workbook?

Used workbooks may have some markings on the inside or not be in perfect condition, but they should be free of answers when you purchase them unless otherwise noted. Unless they already have answers filled in, saving money by purchasing a used workbook is a good idea.

What are the advantages and disadvantages to renting textbooks?

The main advantage is the cost, which can be 30% to 50% less than buying the book.

One disadvantage is that the rental period varies by rental company, typically ranging between 50 and 135 days. Most textbook rental companies allow you to extend your rental period if needed, but there is an additional cost.

Another disadvantage is that some rental companies do not allow you to write or highlight in the textbook. Always read the textbook company's policies.

What if my English textbook does not coincide with my grade level?

Our English textbooks are collections of literature that are not grade specific. The grade specifications are merely suggestions by the textbook authors. Instead of basing our courses around these suggestions, we are utilizing the textbooks as they integrate best with our curriculum.
